OUR NOSY NEW NEIGHBORS

BY PAM LEBLANC

Decades after bears were forced out of West Texas, they're traipsing back and causing a ruckus

In 1994, when Alida Lorio and her husband moved to the quirky Terlingua Ranch development north of Study Butte, where off-the-grid shacks sprout alongside hipster hideouts in the desert of far West Texas, they never expected they'd be living among black bears.

That changed in 2022, when several of the large, furry omnivores began ambling through their 110-acre, cactus-dotted backyard and diving for greasy pizza boxes in a dumpster.

"It's like Terlingua Ranch just got invaded by bears," Lorio says. "We have an arroyo right behind our house, and they were using that as a highway."

Lorio reported the animals to Texas Parks and Wildlife Department officials who connected her with researchers at the Borderlands Research Institute at Sul Ross State University, up the road in Alpine. They set up traps and collared some of the animals as part of an ongoing, multiyear project to learn more about their movements.

Bears, they've discovered, are making a comeback in Texas. And as the animals expand their territory beyond just West Texas, it's time for Texans to prepare to live alongside them.

HOMeward BOUND

Black bears once roamed across much of Texas, from the Big Bend to the Pineywoods, the Panhandle to the Rio Grande, but habitat loss and overhunting—along with ranchers who killed them over fears for their livestock—decimated their population. By the 1950s, they had been extirpated from the state.

A remnant population survived in the remote mountains of northern Mexico, though, and began to rebound. In the late 1980s, a few bears wandered across the Rio Grande and into Big Bend National Park. Now they've been spotted outside the park's gates, along the Rio Grande and even as far as the Hill Country.

"A lot of that is due to the protected landscape, restrictions on hunting bears in Texas and most importantly, a change in people's attitudes in the last 50 years," says Matthew Hewitt, a wildlife research assistant who works on the Borderlands Research Institute's black bear project.

The influx of the animals indicates improving habitat, but it also means an increased likelihood that humans will cross paths with bears, who are drawn to garbage, outdoor grills, deer feeders and pet food.

And that sometimes leads to conflict.

"Human-bear interactions are going to start becoming more common as bears continue to recolonize," Hewitt says. "We're working to get Texans in general to realize bears are a real thing and they do exist here."

In 2020, someone shot and killed a bear that roamed into a Del Rio neighborhood. In 2022, a bear nicknamed Oscar began hanging around a dumpster outside a barbecue restaurant in Terlingua. The animals have popped up in Laredo, the Davis Mountains and Guadalupe Mountains National Park, too, and last September, TPWD officials trapped and relocated a bear on the outskirts of Uvalde, 85 miles west of San Antonio.

Three years ago, Melanie Kaihani noticed a bear on the 243 acres of land she'd just purchased near Sanderson, southeast of Fort Stockton. She set up a wildlife camera and struck gold: a bevy of bears cavorting beneath a deer feeder and climbing a salt lick to take a dip in the water tank she constructed for wildlife. (You can watch their antics on Instagram at @bigbendcountry.)

"With their size and teeth and claws, you'd expect them to be really intimidating creatures, but they're really just big, goofy raccoons," says Kaihani. She notified researchers, who advised her to quit filling the deer feeder. "If they had opposable thumbs, they'd rule the world."

For now, no one really knows how many black bears live in Texas, where they're still considered threatened and hunting them is banned. "More than a dozen, less than a thousand," Hewitt says. "Possibly a couple hundred."

Researchers want to know more about the bears—which have ears shaped like castanets; oval paws with candy corn-sized claws; eyes the size of a quarter; and a distinctive, musky odor—so they're fitting them with collars to track their movements.

Their diet includes mostly plants: prickly pear tunas, acorns, wild persimmons, berries and seeds from piñon pine cones. They also eat insects and roadkill, and researchers in Texas have documented one incident of true predation (a javelina). Full-grown males typically weigh up to 300 pounds.

BEARS WILL BE BEARS

Twice a year, in the spring and fall, Hewitt and others from the Borderlands Research Institute load baked goods and fruit into live traps they set on land where bears have been reported.

"We have learned that bears sure do like doughnuts," Hewitt says.

When the trapdoor shuts behind a bear, the researchers get a text alert on their phones. Someone is always within a 90-minute drive.

"If a trap goes off, it's boots on ground," Hewitt says.

BEAR NECESSITIES

- Never feed or approach bears.
- Secure food, garbage and recycling.
- Remove bird feeders when bears are active.
- Never leave pet food outdoors.
- Clean and store grills and smokers.
- Alert neighbors to bear activity.

“We jump out of bed, drop what we’re doing and drive out to the trap site.”

The researchers use a dart gun or jab stick to anesthetize the bear. Once it’s unconscious, they check its vitals; gather biometric data; attach tracking tags; and take hair, blood and tissue samples. Finally, they attach a rubber collar equipped with a transmitter and battery pack so they can follow the animal’s movements.

So far, they’ve collared about 30 bears, including five on Kaihani’s land near Sanderson and a couple on Lorio’s property in Terlingua Ranch.

“We have been extremely surprised by the sheer size of the area these animals are using,” Hewitt says. “We’ve seen some 80-mile movements from Terlingua Ranch down into Mexico.”

Another surprise? The bears are apparently thriving in the harsh, prickly environment of West Texas.

That’s why Borderlands researchers and scientists with TPWD want to educate the public on how they can safely coexist with the animals.

“Bears get into problems when there’s food involved,” Hewitt says. “Outside that, they’re good at keeping to themselves.”

By removing food that attracts bears, storing grills where bears can’t access them and installing bear-safe dumpsters, people can lessen the odds of a problem, Hewitt says.

If you do encounter a black bear, remember that it’s likely to scamper off if threatened or scared. Stay at least 100 yards away, and if you accidentally find yourself in close proximity to one, continue facing it and back away slowly. Bear spray is a good tool if a bear acts aggressively.

Also, consider yourself lucky.

“Take a second to marvel at a cool critter in a cool place,” Hewitt says.

OH, BOTHER

Back at Terlingua Ranch, Lorio and her husband say they’re learning to coexist with their new neighbors.

“William and I are adaptive, and we figure the bears were here first,” she says. “So we just made some adjustments on how we dealt with garbage.”

They now store trash indoors. They rinse out pet food and other food containers to eliminate odor, and they put chicken bones in the freezer until trash pickup day. Bear-proof dumpsters have been installed in the rural neighborhood too.

Although not all her neighbors appreciate the bears as much as the Lorios do, Alida says she enjoys observing them.

“A lion is kind of regal, but bears look like you’d want to go have a beer with them,” she says. “The rare times that you do see them, it’s like a gift from Mother Nature.” ■

IN THE SUMMER

of 2023, Betty

McCord Studzinski caravanned to Alaska from her home in Georgetown, north of Austin, with 12 other RVers. The majority made the trek in large 45-foot motor homes, but her recreational vehicle was the smallest of the bunch: a 17-foot Texas-made travel trailer perfect for her and Tonka, her bulldog.

“They were breaking down here and there,” says Studzinski, 78. “We had no issues at all.” She and Tonka covered 11,000 miles on that trip. Her favorite part was the wildlife. “They were everywhere,” she says. “And the scenery was just breathtaking.”

Studzinski has seen 49 states and many national parks with her Casita trailer in tow and has no plans to slow down. This year, she’s planning a trip to Maine and the Maritime Provinces of Canada.

Texas was the top destination for shipments of new RVs in 2023, according to the RV Industry Association, but our state also produces its very own travel rigs. Casita, Capri Camper and Sportmobile are niche manufacturers compared to the corporate behemoths, and each of these companies has a waitlist for every RV that they build right here in Texas. The folks who buy these vehicles are loyal, and for them, it means buying into an ethos of community, since they don’t have to go through a dealership.

Each of the companies’ RVs take unique forms. Sportmobile’s converted vans are like turtle shells—you live and drive in your home. Casita makes small, fiberglass egg-shaped trailers that you tote behind you. And Capri makes the classic truck camper for pickups.

An RVIA study found that RV ownership has increased 62% over the past 20 years, with nearly a quarter of owners aged 18–34. These are a few of the intrepid travelers who love their Texas-built homes on wheels.

Betty McCord Studzinski loves her Casita Spirit Deluxe camper. “I hardly ever go back to a place I’ve been before,” she says.

LARRY PANCAKE IS a professional saddle bronc rider and music and rodeo promoter from Amarillo.

“I started rodeoing when I was 12,” he says. “My seventh grade PE teacher taught me to rope.” The Capri camper is a mainstay for professional cowboys like him. The campers are so iconic in Western culture, several have been featured in the TV series Yellowstone.

And they’ve been custom-made in Texas since 1969. In 2003, the company set up manufacturing in the tiny town of Bluff Dale, southwest of Fort Worth. They offer four models to top every size of pickup, with retro styling on the outside and modern amenities inside.

Pancake has owned four Capri campers, and his current one sits atop a 1997 Freightliner chassis. He spends about 150 days a year in it, hunting elk in New Mexico, riding broncs and promoting events across the U.S. The interior is decorated with a neon flamingo and a Welcome to Las Vegas sign.

“Anytime I leave the house, I’m in my Capri. I don’t rent hotel rooms,” Pancake says. “I like having my own space.”

His favorite feature is his Capri’s blackout shades that keep the interior completely dark in the daytime and under streetlamps. At big rodeos, there are sometimes hours between rotations. “I can watch a movie or take a nap,” Pancake says. “The blackout shades are huge.”

He also had Capri build a dream rig from his childhood rodeo days. The Bronc Stomper is a 1977 Chevrolet C20 Camper Special with a Capri camper on it. It’s a show truck he uses to promote his National Finals Rodeo events in Las Vegas.

“When I was a kid growing up in the ’70s, you had made it big time if you had a Chevy Camper Special with a Capri camper on it,” Pancake says. “You either pulled horses with it or rode bulls. That’s what the elite rodeo rig was.”

Larry Pancake, a professional saddle bronc rider, calls his outfit, made by Capri Camper, the Bronc Stomper. He also outfitted a Freightliner with a Capri camper, and he uses the big rig to haul his smaller truck.

TOTE

STUDZINSKI, THE AVID RVer from Georgetown, has owned just about every type of home on wheels—from a pop-up tent trailer to a massive motor home.

“I never could find the right size for me,” Studzinski says. “I thought being a single female, traveling alone, with just a dog, I needed an engine-driven vehicle.” That way if she felt unsafe camping, she could go from her bed to the driver’s seat without exiting the rig.

Studzinski likes to boondock (camp off-grid, without hookups), but when all you have is one vehicle, you’re likely to lose your spot if you leave briefly and drive to a trailhead or into town. So she started looking at trailers and settled on Casita.

The tough little fiberglass trailers have been built in

CHARLES BORSKEY SET up shop in El Paso in 1961, converting Volkswagen and Ford vans. In the following decades, his company added innovations like “penthouse” tops (expandable roofs for sleeping) and four-wheel-drive conversions. In 1984, Borskey moved Sportsmobile to Austin.

I built my first van in 2005 with Sportsmobile, a four-wheel-drive Ford Econoline. The interior was sparse, with a compact cabinet, microwave, TV and a small “garage” area in the back for my mountain bike.

These days, the company offers standardized floor plans but also has an infinite selection of custom options to build your Goldilocks van. I chose the minimalist approach and christened my go-anywhere machine the Travel-All.

My first excursion was a shakedown trip to the Big Bend. The penthouse top, which raises above the van’s roof, withstood a blustery windstorm in Terlingua, and the four-wheel-drive chassis had no problem navigating the rough and rocky Black Gap Road in the backcountry of Big Bend National Park.

I deemed the Travel-All ready for a remote expedition in Colorado and drove it deep into the Rio Grande National Forest, inching down an impossibly steep Jeep trail to a campsite along the rushing headwaters of the Rio Grande. I spent four glorious days in absolute solitude next to a Texas river born in Colorado.

I quickly outgrew the Travel-All’s sparse interior, so back to Sportsmobile I went.

In 2007, a few years after Mercedes-Benz introduced their sleek Sprinter van to the American market, I ordered one from Sportsmobile, one of the first certified outfitters in the U.S., and christened it Bruce. Unlike the Travel-All, it ate highway miles like I consume breakfast tacos—with glee and fervor.

I drove it all over the Western states, from Carmel-by-the-Sea, on the coast of central California, to the Grand Canyon, where my wife and I honeymooned in it with our trusty beagle, Pizza. In the 2000s, the Mercedes Sprinter van was uncommon, but now they’re ubiquitous. Ford and Dodge offer their own Euro-styled vans, and Sportsmobile does conversions on those as well out of their facility in North Austin.

Texas since 1983. Their current manufacturing plant is in Rice, south of Dallas, where they produce five models that are 17 feet long. The molded two-piece fiberglass design is built more like a boat than an RV. When a hailstorm damaged Studzinski’s home, her Casita, which sits uncovered outside, sustained no damage.

She purchased her Spirit Deluxe model in 2019 and had it outfitted with 325 watts of rooftop solar panels and four 100-amp-hour batteries. She bought a Subaru and promptly loaded up Tonka and went to Big Bend National Park, where she camped in the Chisos Basin campground.

The sites are small, but her little fiberglass “egg” fit perfectly, and with all her solar power, she could run her fridge with ease. Finding her perfect RV has fueled more wanderlust for Studzinski.

“I hardly ever go back to a place I’ve been before,” she says. “There are so many other places on my list that I want to see.” ■

Inflation Takes Its Toll: Rate Increase Coming

NOBODY LIKES TO BE THE BEARER of bad news, but I will get straight to it—there will be a rate increase this year. Starting with April bills, the base electricity rate for residential and small commercial members will go up almost a half-cent, and the monthly customer charge will go up $5.

For most members with average usage, that is an $11-$13 monthly increase. A second adjustment of $5.75 per month on the customer charge is also planned for 2026.

Large commercial and business rates will see increases as well, as we adjust rates to accommodate the last several years of high inflation

While I would rather not have any increase at all, I am proud of the Trinity Valley Electric Cooperative team for doing great work to keep costs as low as possible in the face of more than 42 percent inflation since the last rate adjustment in 2008. This puts us in a very competitive position compared to 12-month rate plans in the deregulated market, and well below the average cost of electricity statewide.

Thankfully, the rate of inflation has been slowed in recent months. I hope that this rate adjustment will put us in a great position to maintain stable rates and reliable service that members expect and deserve for years to come.

Our priorities are summed up best in our co-op’s mission statement: At Trinity Valley Electric Cooperative, we are committed to our member-owners to deliver safe and reliable electric power at a competitive price, with a strong emphasis on member service, community and sound business practices.

A recent cost-of-service study gave us a lot of data to make sure that our adjusted rate structure will give every member a fair bill. And, as your nonprofit energy provider, any excess revenue makes its way back to you in the form of capital credits.

I am also very aware that, even though we’ve done our best to keep this increase as small as possible, any increase can be a major hardship for some TVEC members. We are here to help connect you to resources and assistance. Local organizations are available to help in times of need, as well as help with home weatherization projects. You may also find contact information for assistance in your area at tvec.net/bill-payment-assistance.

As we launch into the new year, this will mark the co-op’s 87th year of serving rural Texans with power. The cooperative business model is built on providing this shared resource in a way that is cost effective, and we will continue to do just that. This year, as always, I am very grateful to be entrusted with keeping the lights on for you and your family. ■

5 Tips for Hiring an Electrician

A LICENSED ELECTRICIAN can help with various home projects, from lighting upgrades to full renovations. Make sure you find the right pro for the job.

1. Hire a licensed, qualified electrician. Look for a master electrician to manage the project. They have the most experience and will often oversee the work of a journey-level electrician or apprentice.
2. Make sure they're insured and licensed. Seasoned electricians know the importance of protecting themselves in case of an accident, and they should have ample insurance coverage. In Texas, anyone who performs, or offers to perform, nonexempt electrical work must be licensed and perform that work through a licensed electrical contractor. You can verify an electrician's license by going to www.tdlr.texas.gov/electricians. Some cities also require municipal licenses.
3. Read all the reviews. Hire an electrician that has several positive reviews—not just one or two. Read reviews on various websites like Google, Yelp, Facebook and HomeAdvisor, and consider friends and neighbors for recommendations.
4. Determine your budget. Get at least two quotes since prices can vary greatly. Knowing your budget up front helps move the process along.
5. Talk timeline. Some electricians overbook projects. If your job is time-sensitive, convey that early on and discuss a realistic timeline with the electrician.

If you are ever unhappy with the work of an electrical contractor, you can file a complaint with the Texas Department of Licensing and Regulation at www.tdlr.texas.gov/complaints or contact the enforcement division at (512) 539-5600. ■

TVEC Rate Adjustment to Take Effect in April

BEGINNING WITH APRIL BILLS, which include charges for some February usage, Trinity Valley Electric Cooperative members will see a slight increase in electricity rates and monthly customer charges. The last rate adjustment set the current residential base rate of $0.10484 per kilowatt-hour in 2008.

A member information meeting regarding the rate changes, and how the new rate structure was formulated will be held at the TVEC headquarters, 1800 E. Highway 243 in Kaufman, at 6 p.m. January 21.

The rate changes, which will be reflected in the TVEC Tariff for Electric Service, are summarized below and in the table on the facing page, as well as online at tvec.net/rates.

Residential Rates

TVEC residential service rates will adjust to $0.109628 per kWh, and the monthly customer charge will rise to $25.

Commercial Single Phase Rates

Commercial single-phase service rates will adjust to $0.109628 per kWh as well, and the monthly customer charge will rise to $28.

Commercial Three-Phase and Large Power Rates

Three-phase service rates with demand charges have been adjusted as well. See the rates page on tvec.net/rates or contact your TVEC business development team for more details.

Future Rate Considerations

A second adjustment of the monthly customer charge has been approved and scheduled for April of 2026. This will raise the residential customer charge to $30.75, and the commercial single-phase customer charge to $35.50. No rate adjustment on the per-kWh rate is necessary at that time.

Rates in Context

These rate changes are necessary for TVEC to continue providing reliable electric service to our members.

Since 2008, general inflation in the United States has increased the prices of consumer goods by more than 42 percent. Just since 2020, the price of many goods used to build and maintain electric distribution infrastructure has gone up dramatically.

This rate adjustment is expected to put us in a good position to maintain reliable service for the years ahead. The changes keeping our simple rate structure that is fair and easy to understand, while also being competitive compared to rates across the state. ■

Making the Switch to an Electric Vehicle?

YOU'VE PROBABLY NOTICED more electric vehicles on the road and charging stations around town. The increasing popularity of EVs is being driven by several factors, such as lower prices, more accessible charging stations and financial incentives.

According to Kelley Blue Book, EVs accounted for 7.6% of all vehicle sales in 2023, up from 5.9% in 2022. That market share is even larger when factoring in hybrid vehicles.

While EVs may not work for everyone's daily driving needs, which depend on commute times, public charging availability and other factors, EVs can provide many benefits, such as lower operating costs and less maintenance.

If you're considering making the switch to an EV, Trinity Valley Electric Cooperative is here to help. As your trusted local energy partner, we can help you make informed decisions about home charging options and help you decide if an EV works for your typical driving needs. 241487002

Types of EVs

There are three common types of EVs. All-electric vehicles, also known as battery electric vehicles or BEVs, are powered solely by a large battery. Because BEVs are powered by a rechargeable battery alone, they do not use gasoline, and therefore no direct exhaust emissions. On average, BEVs can drive 100–400 miles before they must be recharged.

Plug-in hybrid electric vehicles are powered by a combination of a large battery, an electric motor and a gas-powered engine. PHEVs recharge battery power from regenerative braking and can also be plugged into a standard outlet. Depending on the model, they can run on full battery power (alone) for 15–60 miles.

Hybrid electric vehicles use an electric motor to assist gas-powered engines. Similar to PHEVs, HEVs can also recharge from regenerative braking, but the power comes from the gas engine; they do not plug into an electrical outlet.

Home Charging Options

Most new BEVs and PHEVs include a Level 1 charging unit (120-volt-compatible), which can be plugged into any standard household electrical outlet. A Level 1 charger typically provides 2–5 miles of range per hour of charging, which may work for people with shorter daily commutes.

For lengthier daily drives, Level 2 chargers can be installed for faster charging, at 10–30 miles of range per hour. A Level 2 charger uses 240-volt service, which may require electrical upgrades conducted by a licensed electrician.

We're Here To Help

Consumer interest in EVs is growing, and that's why Trinity TVEC provides information about charging requirements, vehicle options and more so our members can make informed EV purchasing decisions.

If you own an EV or plan to purchase one, we encourage you to contact the TVEC energy management team at energymangement@tvec.coop. As more consumers make the switch, it's important for the co-op to understand our community's charging needs. ■

Pop's Fried Chicken

Terrell cafeteria offers more than the name implies

RAPID GROWTH IS PUSHING through northern Kaufman County from west to east, and that is very easy to see as Terrell's west side booms with new retail, commercial growth and housing developments. But a small restaurant in the older part of town is has been a mainstay for 50 years.

Pop's Fried Chicken boasts more than chicken, with 16 vegetable and 15 meat choices on the wide-ranging menu.

"We've been going to Pop's for a long time," said Paul Camacho, TVEC crew foreman. "The fried chicken is good but so are all the other foods. I usually get the gizzards because they are on point."

Getting in and out quickly is always a priority at lunch, and Pop's takes care of that with remarkable efficiency. Entrées including meat loaf, chicken fried steak, chicken and dumplings, and barbecue ribs and sausage give plenty of options for any palate and hot sides to match.

"It is just a great place to eat," Camacho said. "The staff is very friendly and the atmosphere is more like eating at home, just a place you can really enjoy your meal."

Pop's Fried Chicken is located at 701 E. Moore Ave. (Highway 80) in Terrell. You can find them online at popsinterrelltexas.com. ■

Striking It Big

War vet Frank Saucier left behind a big-league career to chase oil

BY ANNE R. KEENE • ILLUSTRATION BY ERIC KITTELBERGER

IMAGINE GIVING UP a promising baseball career to become a landman and wildcatter in the oil business. That's what Francis "Frank" Saucier did when he saw more potential in oil than baseball.

At 98, the Amarilloan and former outfielder for the St. Louis Browns (now the Baltimore Orioles) has seen almost a century of booms and busts and war and peace.

Saucier was born in 1926 on a Missouri farm, educated in a one-room schoolhouse and carried water to wheat field workers for 25 cents a day at age 6. By 10, the youngest of six children founded a fur-trapping enterprise with a Remington rifle, earning money for used books.

As a teen, Saucier heard about the attack on Pearl Harbor as he and his cousin walked home from a movie. "A Model T pulled up with folks who shared the news. I had no idea where Pearl Harbor was," he says with a soft-spoken West Texas drawl in a recent interview at his home, where he displays baseballs signed by Hall of Famers Satchel Paige and Rogers Hornsby. "My family did not own a radio, so I raced home to tell them about the bombing."

The day after his 17th birthday, Saucier enlisted in the Navy, where he enrolled in the V-12 officer training program at Westminster College in Fulton, Missouri. As an apprentice seaman, Saucier says, "My rank was so low I could crawl under a rattlesnake's belly under a wagon wheel with a stovepipe hat on."

Saucier served on an amphibious warfare commando team—a forerunner to the Navy SEALs. "President Truman dropped the first atomic bomb when we were about 1,000 miles from Japan," he says. "Though there was no alcohol on board the ship, we had a big party and thought, 'By golly, we made it.'"

Strong farm-boy wrists from swinging an axe and milking cows had helped make Saucier a star hitter in college. After the war, he signed a minor-league contract, won three batting titles and was named player of the year in 1950 by The Sporting News.

Still, fame never stopped Saucier from taking offseason roustabout jobs in the oil fields, where he invested his baseball earnings to drill for crude, which was then selling for about $3 a barrel.

He signed with the Browns in 1951, realizing a childhood dream conjured on the wooden grandstand at Sportsman's Park in St. Louis. He played with or against Ted Williams, Yogi Berra, Minnie Miñoso and Paige along with Texans Dr. Bobby Brown and Eddie Robinson.

But Saucier is most remembered for a wacky public relations stunt engineered by Browns owner Bill Veeck, who brought in 3-foot-7-inch Eddie Gaedel to pinch-hit for Saucier during a game.

In 1952, Saucier was at spring training when he was called back to active duty during the Korean War. He'd already been dealing with chronic problems with his throwing arm, and after his discharge in 1954, he took a job as a district landman for Humble Oil Co. in Tyler.

Saucier never attended another major-league game. He worked in the oil and finance business until he was 85.

Regrets? No way.

"Baseball opened a lot of doors for me," he says. "I just happened to be in the right place at the right time." ■

Hearty Soups

Enticing ingredients and easy options have you set for the coldest of days

BY VIANNEY RODRIGUEZ, FOOD EDITOR

Pozole verde is one of my favorite soups to make when feeding a crowd. Pozole is a traditional Mexican soup that can be made with chicken or pork. (Verde means green.) It's the absolute perfect bowl to enjoy all winter! It comes together quickly and is even tastier the next day for lunch.

Pozole Verde

SOUP

- 1 pound tomatillos, husks removed, rinsed
- 1 large onion, halved
- 1 jalapeño pepper, halved, seeds removed for less spice
- 2 cloves garlic
- 1 tablespoon dried oregano
- 10 cups water, divided use
- 1 teaspoon kosher salt, or more to taste
- 2 teaspoons ground black pepper, or more to taste
- 1 bunch fresh cilantro, coarsely chopped
- 4 pounds boneless, skinless chicken breasts
- 2 cans white hominy (15 ounces each), drained and rinsed
- Lime wedges, for serving
- Salsa, for serving

FRIED TORTILLA STRIPS

- 6 corn tortillas
- ¼ cup vegetable oil
- 1 teaspoon salt

- 1. SOUP Add tomatillos, onion, jalapeño, garlic, oregano, 4 cups water, salt and pepper to a large pot. Bring to a boil, reduce heat, cover and simmer 15 minutes.
- 2. Using a large slotted spoon, remove tomatillos, onion, jalapeño and garlic from the broth and add to a blender with 1 cup of the cooking water and cilantro. Start blender on low, then work up to high until ingredients are smooth. Taste and add salt as needed.
- 3. Add blended sauce, chicken and the remaining 6 cups water to a large pot. Bring to a boil, reduce heat, cover and simmer 30–45 minutes or until chicken is fork-tender. Remove from pot and shred.
- 4. Add shredded chicken and hominy to the pot. Simmer 15 minutes. Taste and adjust seasoning.
- 5. FRIED TORTILLA STRIPS Slice tortillas into ½-inch strips. Heat oil in a skillet over medium-high heat. Add tortilla strips in batches, stirring often, and fry until crispy and lightly browned. Remove from oil, place on a paper towel-lined plate and sprinkle with salt.
- 6. Serve soup hot with tortilla strips, lime wedges and salsa.

Nonna's Quick Pasta Soup

MARIA MEARS
DEEP EAST TEXAS EC

This is an easy dinner option that can be ready in under 30 minutes. It features orzo, a tiny, rice-shaped pasta that absorbs the flavors of the broth beautifully. It's a versatile dish that can be customized by adding your favorite vegetables, herbs and protein, like chicken or beans.

5 tablespoons (½ stick) butter
5 cloves garlic, minced
4 cups chicken broth
1¼ cups orzo
½ cup finely grated Parmesan cheese, divided use
2 teaspoons salt, or more to taste
1 teaspoon ground black pepper, or more to taste
Fresh parsley, minced (optional)

1. Melt butter in a 2-quart saucepan over medium heat. Add garlic and sauté 1 minute, stirring often to avoid browning.
2. Pour in chicken broth and orzo and stir to combine. Bring to a boil, then reduce heat to medium and simmer. Cook orzo according to package directions, stirring occasionally, until al dente.
3. Remove from heat and stir in half the Parmesan cheese. Add salt and pepper.
4. Ladle into bowls and top with remaining Parmesan cheese and parsley.

Shrimp Chowder

AMY BARILE
MIDSOUTH EC

Barile's chowder is a comforting and flavorful dish that combines the sweetness of corn with the rich, savory taste of shrimp. It's an easy-to-make, satisfying meal that feels indulgent yet light, making it an ideal choice for weeknight dinners or cozy gatherings.

6 slices fully cooked bacon, diced, reserving 1 tablespoon fat
1 tablespoon (½ stick) butter
3 stalks celery, diced
1 small yellow onion, diced
4 cloves garlic, minced
1 teaspoon salt, or more to taste
1 teaspoon ground black pepper, or more to taste
2 tablespoons flour
2½ cups milk

1 can whole kernel corn (15 ounces)
1 can cream-style corn (14.75 ounces)
½ teaspoon cayenne pepper
1 pound shrimp, peeled and deveined
½ cup half-and-half
Green onions, minced, for serving

1. Add bacon fat, butter, celery and onion to a Dutch oven or large, deep saucepan. Cook over medium heat, stirring often, until tender, about 4 minutes. Add garlic, salt and pepper and cook an additional 30 seconds.
2. Sprinkle flour over the vegetable mixture. Stir to coat and allow to cook about a minute more. Slowly add milk to the mixture, stirring to eliminate any lumps.
3. Add both cans of corn and cayenne. Let cook until slightly thickened, about 5 minutes.
4. Add shrimp and cook about 3 minutes. Stir in half-and-half.
5. Remove from heat, taste and add salt and pepper if desired.
6. Serve warm, topped with bacon and green onions.

Chicken and White Bean Soup

JENNY HARTSFIELD
BRYAN TEXAS UTILITIES

Hartsfield's soup is another great recipe for a busy week, delivering the rich, slow-cooked flavors of an all-day soup in a fraction of the time. White beans pair with green chiles to complement perfectly poached chicken. Serve with a crusty bread or tortilla chips—so scrumptious.

- 4 boneless, skinless chicken breasts
- 7 cups water
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 1 dried bay leaf
- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 1 tablespoon (1/8 stick) butter
- 2 medium onions, diced
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 2 teaspoons ground cumin
- 1 1/2 teaspoons dried oregano
- 1 teaspoon cayenne pepper

- 4 cans white beans (15 ounces each), undrained
- 2 cans mild chopped green chiles (4 ounces each)
- 8 cups grated Monterey Jack cheese
- Sour cream, for serving
- Tortilla chips, for serving

1. Add chicken, water, salt and bay leaf to a Dutch oven or large saucepan and cook over medium heat. Bring to a boil, reduce heat and cover. Simmer until chicken is fork-tender, 15–20 minutes.
2. Remove chicken and shred, reserving broth.
3. In another Dutch oven or large saucepan, add olive oil, butter and onions and cook over medium heat 15 minutes, stirring often.
4. Stir in garlic, cumin, oregano and cayenne and cook an additional 2 minutes. Add white beans, green chiles, shredded chicken and reserved broth. Bring to a boil, then reduce heat and simmer 10 minutes.
5. When ready to serve, stir in cheese. Serve hot with sour cream and tortilla chips.

COURTESY CHET GARNER

Nuts About Pecans

After Missourians built the world's biggest, Seguin rallied to reclaim the crown

BY CHET GARNER

HERE IN TEXAS, we like to have the biggest of everything, whether it's boots, burgers or bulls. So I wasn't surprised to learn that we even claim the original world's biggest pecan, proudly displayed on the lawn of the Guadalupe County Courthouse in Seguin, about 35 miles east of San Antonio. I decided it was a story (and a nut) I needed to crack for myself.

Seguin has a population of about 35,000 and boasts a lively downtown shaded by towering pecan trees. It's appropriate considering pecans are one of the town's most valuable resources and grow plentifully along the Guadalupe River.

So after filling my belly at Burnt Bean Co. with a platter of Tex-Mex barbecue, it was time to fill my head with nutty facts.

I crossed the street and found the original giant pecan in all its glory in front of the courthouse. While not technically a real pecan, this concrete rendition was placed here in 1962 and measures more than 5 feet long and 2½ feet wide. It was impressive for sure but not as dramatic as the battle it spawned.

Twenty years later, in 1982, farmers in Brunswick, Missouri, claimed the title with a 12-foot pecan that weighed over 12,000 pounds. In 2002, Seguin native John Pape set out to make a bigger one but didn't know about the one in Missouri's pecan capital, and so his 11-foot pecan on wheels never wore the crown. But in 2010, the city of Seguin banded together and crafted a 16-foot pecan that brought the title securely back where it belongs.

The current king of pecans is polished up and ready for photos just outside the Pecan Museum of Texas in Seguin. Everything is bigger in Texas, even if it takes a few years. ■

ABOVE A rather large nut. Oh, and that's Chet perched upon it.

Blade Stunner

Beautifully made, magnificent to look at, this knife is a work of art at only $99

It's not often you happen upon a bladesmith who has gem cutting skills. But finding needles in haystacks is what we do best, so when we saw this master craftsman's handiwork, we made certain to procure some of these Southwestern masterpieces to complete our collection.

The stainless steel blade, bolster and pommel are exquisitely etched and would have looked great with a less ambitious handle. But the results of overachieving are stunning here. The turquoise-blue colored handle is ablaze with assorted stones like jasper, marble, sunstone, and coral that have been hand cut and inlaid in a Southwestern motif.

But we don't stop there. While supplies last, we'll include a pair of $99, 8x21 power compact binoculars and a genuine leather sheath FREE when you purchase the Sedona Knife.
